Forecast For Northeast England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Tuesday 23 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain, heavy and persistent on hills today. Windy and mild.

Today:
Cloudy with rain, some heavy and persistent, especially on the hills during the day. Perhaps some sheltered eastern parts staying largely dry. A windy day, with local gales, especially on hills. Despite the wind and rain it will stay mild. Maximum temperature 11 deg C (52 deg F).

Tonight:
Further rain, heavy and persistent, especially on the hills overnight. Windy with local gales, mainly over higher ground. However, some sheltered eastern will remain largely dry. Mild. Minimum temperature 9 deg C (48 deg F).

Wednesday:
Cloud and outbreaks of rain will gradually ease and slowly clear southeastwards during Wednesday. Windy at first, gradually easing. Drier and brighter in far north later. Staying mild. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Thursday to Saturday:
Thursday will be largely dry, with sunny spells and lighter winds. Turning increasingly settled on Friday and Saturday, with plenty of fine, dry and bright weather around. Mild overall.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.